

PREPARED FOR REBECCA O'DRISCOLL, MERVUE LABORATORIES

Half a day on AI, worked through on Mervue's own material

A half day with the Mervue marketing team, run on your own brand guidelines, assets and listings rather than on examples. By the end the team will have used these tools on Mervue work and will know where they are genuinely good and where they fall over. You then get a written map of where AI fits in Mervue's marketing, ranked by what pays back soonest, so that the next decision is an informed one.

Quality first, then automate

IRELAND'S MARKETER OF THE YEAR, 2022

Before I use any of these tools I ask one question: what does really good look like here? Not what AI can do, but what the best version of this marketing would be, and the level of quality I would want to stand over. The tools come after that, and they are judged against it.

That is also how I teach it. A session that demonstrates tools in the abstract leaves a team with a list of product names and no judgement about when to trust them. So we spend the half day on Mervue's own work instead. By the end your team will have used these tools on your material, seen where they are genuinely good and where they fall over, and formed its own view.

Twenty years in brand is what tells me where the quality bar sits: Head of Brand at O2 Ireland, then CMO at the National Lottery, then Head of Brand at Indeed and Miro, both global roles.

What we would work through

This comes from your emails and our conversation in June. You have three pieces of work in front of you that you think these tools should be able to help with: a plan for taking the new pet range into retail, video and social content built from footage you already own, and the year-to-date spend against annual budget. You also said the thing that matters most for this session, which is that you want to cover the basics first and then be specific about what you need. So we work on Mervue's own files rather than examples.

01 Where these tools are strong, and where they break

I ran generation tests on your Skin & Coat sachet last week. The tool re-lettered your wordmark and printed "Est. 1026" instead of 1986, and produced the gel as a rigid ribbed cylinder rather than the soft blob it is. We start here, because a team that knows the failure modes checks the right things and stops trusting output that looks finished.

02 The retail launch

We brief the plan for taking the pet range into retail properly, then look at what comes back that is useful and what comes back generic. This is the one you said you were struggling to outline, and you would leave the day with a real start on it.

03 Written work at volume

Amazon listing copy, briefs for distributors and retail accounts, and export-language versions for Turkish, Spanish and your other markets.

04 Social and video, from what you already own

Your five cat clips and your eight Amazon listing images. What can be produced from footage and artwork you already have, what still needs your designer, and how to tell those apart before committing to a piece of work.

05 The numbers

We build the year-to-date spend against annual budget analysis during the session, so the method is yours to repeat each month rather than a file I hand over.

06 Staying on brand when more than one person is making things

Your logo and its clear space, your colours, your tone and your product claims, written down once in a form these tools can follow. This is the practical answer to distributors and retailers producing their own off-brand versions.

What you get afterwards. A written map of where AI fits in Mervue's marketing, ranked by what pays back soonest, with the effort and the cost against each item. You said you would be able to be more specific about what you need once you knew more about what these tools can do. This is the document that lets you do that, whether you brief me, another supplier, or your own team.

| › Length. Half a day, roughly four hours including a break. | › Where. Your office in Cork, or online if that suits the team better. |
| › Who. Up to eight people. Your marketing team, and I would suggest including your head of nutrition and your commercial manager, since they already use these tools. | › Preparation. I work through your brand guidelines, assets and Amazon listings beforehand, so the session runs on real Mervue material from the first minute. |

What it costs

THE SESSION

A working half day, and the plan that comes out of it

- › Preparation against your own brand guidelines, assets and listings before the day
- › The half day itself, with your team, working on Mervue material throughout
- › The written map afterwards: where AI fits in Mervue's marketing, ranked by what pays back soonest, with effort and cost against each item

€800

plus VAT

Dates to suit your team. If you would rather do it online, the price is the same.

WHY IT IS PRICED THIS WAY

This session's job is to let you decide what happens next, so I have priced it to be an easy decision rather than a budget exercise. It is deliberately a small commitment.

Some of what the map points at, your team will do in-house once they have seen how. Some of it you may want built for you, and the brand consistency piece in particular tends to be the one companies want help with, because it only works if it is set up properly once. That is a conversation for after the day, when you know what you are asking for.

WHAT IT DOES NOT INCLUDE

Your own Claude subscription. A Teams plan gives your team shared access and the right security settings for company material, and it is a modest monthly cost held in Mervue's name. I will advise on the setup as part of the session, at no charge.

Pick a date that suits the team

Email me at paul@runwithfoxes.com with a couple of dates that work, and I will send over the short list of files to have ready beforehand.
