

PREPARED FOR MARIE-CLAIRE MEALY, SANTEGIC

Build the Santegic marketing team you never had

A marketing team, built for Santegic and handed over. The outreach on LinkedIn and email, properly researched and properly written. The watching brief that tells you when a company is about to need you. The writing that means founders and compliance leads know Santegic before their deadline arrives. And the layer that runs all of it, so that this is an hour of your week rather than your evenings.

Quality first, then automate

IRELAND'S MARKETER OF THE YEAR, 2022

Before I build anything, I ask one question: what does really good look like here? Not what AI can do, but the best version of this marketing, and the level of quality I would want to stand over.

So I start where I always have. If there were no AI at all, what team would I hire to do this properly? Someone doing the outbound research and writing every message by hand, someone watching the market so we know when a company is about to need us, someone building your authority in public, and someone running the campaigns and keeping score. I map that team first, then build exactly it, with agents instead of hires.

Twenty years in brand is what tells me where the bar sits: Head of Brand at O2 Ireland, then CMO at the National Lottery, Head of Brand at Indeed and Miro, both global roles. Positioning, messaging and tone are written first, then built into everything the agents make.

What we would build for Santegic

This comes from our conversation. Marketing and sales at Santegic is currently you and Larry, and almost all of it is done by hand. You build a list in Prospeo, paste the details into Claude for a draft sequence, paste that back into HubSpot, and then work through the LinkedIn touches yourself. The research alone takes two or three hours of an evening. That is a lot of skilled time going into work a system should be doing, and it is why the outbound stops whenever something else needs you.

- 01 The 95 and the 5. In any category, only about five percent of your potential customers are in the market to buy in a given quarter. When you ran outbound and most replies said they were busy, that was the other ninety-five percent answering honestly. The work has two halves: go after the five percent who are looking now, and build familiarity with the ninety-five percent who are not, so that Santegic is a name they already know when their deadline arrives. You said this yourself on the call, and you say it to your own clients: the best time to come to Santegic is well before you think you need to.
- 02 The Outbound Agent. This is the work you currently do in the evenings. It finds the companies in your ICP, screens them, finds the right person at each one, researches them properly, and writes every LinkedIn message and every email individually. It runs your existing sequence of four emails and three LinkedIn touches as one thing, and it drives HubSpot through its API rather than asking you to paste anything anywhere. You approve before anything sends.
- 03 Scout. The Outbound Agent decides how well a company is contacted. Scout decides when. It watches your target companies for the signals you hunt by hand today and told me were few and far between: a funding round, a US partnership, a company entering the medical device process, a wellness product edging toward a clinical claim, or a new regulation landing on a category that does not understand it. It hands the company to the Outbound Agent, and it does not write copy. In most weeks most of the list produces nothing, because nothing has changed at those companies.
- 04 The Ghostwriter. Your category is trust-led. You told me people need to half know you before they will talk, which is also why the LinkedIn ads did not work. This writes in Larry's name and in yours, on the subjects your buyers actually deal with: what a new regulation means in plain English, the mistakes companies make in medical device classification, where the line sits between wellness and a clinical claim. Nothing publishes without one of you approving it.
- 05 The Campaign Manager. This is the layer that runs the others and drives the tools you already pay for. It loads and runs the sequences in HubSpot, keeps score across all the agents, and reports what is working. It does not replace HubSpot. It replaces the person who has to look after HubSpot, which today is you.

The parts, and what each one is for

STEP ONE

The 95 and the 5

This is the principle we talked about on the call, and it explains why the four products below are the ones we would build. In any category, only about five percent of your potential customers are in the market to buy in a given quarter. The rest are not. They may well be a good fit for Santegic, but right now they are busy, or they have someone else, or the deadline that will force the issue has not arrived yet. When you ran outbound and most of the replies said they were busy, that was not a failure of the message. That was the ninety-five percent answering honestly.

What matters commercially is what happens when one of them moves into the five percent. By the time a company decides it needs regulatory help, it usually already has a short list in its head, made up of the names it has heard of. If Santegic has done nothing to be known in the meantime, the first approach lands as a cold call from a stranger, competing against a firm the buyer already recognises. You described this yourself, twice, without needing the theory: you want people to know about you before they need you, and you tell your own clients that the best time to come to Santegic is well before they think they need to.

STEP TWO

The Outbound Agent

Contacting prospects properly is a job a person does, and doing it well at any volume has traditionally required a full-time hire, an agency, or a freelancer. The Outbound Agent carries out that job. It finds the companies in your ICP, screens them, finds the right person at each one, whether that is a founder or a chief growth officer at a startup or a compliance or security lead at a larger organisation, researches them and what is actually happening at their company, and writes a message that could only have been sent to that person. It works on LinkedIn and on email, and nothing sends until you have read it.

It runs the sequence you already use, four emails and three LinkedIn touches, as one thing, driving HubSpot through its API. The manual middle step disappears. The two or three hours you currently spend on an evening researching prospects and copying between Prospeo, Claude and HubSpot is the part being automated. The writing and the judgement about who is worth writing to is the part where quality goes in, and that is where the work goes instead.

STEP THREE

Scout

The Outbound Agent decides how well a company is contacted. Scout decides when. It holds the watch list and waits for a real change: a health-tech company raises funding, a company announces a US partnership, a product enters the medical device certification process, a wellness product starts making claims that edge toward a clinical decision, a new regulation lands on a category that does not yet understand it, or a compliance or security leader arrives at a larger organisation.

These are the signals you described hunting by hand, and said were few and far between. When one appears, Scout checks the company is not already in play, and hands it to the Outbound Agent, which does the research and writes the message. Scout does not write copy. You approve the shortlist before anything goes out. In most weeks most of the list produces nothing, because nothing has changed at those companies, and that is the system working correctly rather than a fault.

STEP FOUR

The Ghostwriter

Your category runs on trust. You told me people need to half know you before they will talk to you, which is also the honest reason the LinkedIn ads did not work. Being known and credible in public is therefore the channel that does work for a firm like Santegic, and paid advertising is not.

The Ghostwriter writes in Larry's name and in yours, on the subjects your buyers actually deal with: what a new regulation means for a founder in plain English, the mistakes companies make early in medical device classification, where the line sits between a wellness product and a clinical claim, and why the right time to sort compliance is long before you think you need to. It learns the voice from what you have already written, it holds the positioning so everything argues the same thing, and nothing publishes until you or Larry approve it.

STEP FIVE

The Campaign Manager

On their own each agent does its job. Run together, the work compounds, and something has to run them. The Campaign Manager holds the plan, briefs the other agents, loads and runs the sequences in HubSpot through its API, holds everything at the point where a human should look, keeps score across all of it, and reports what is working so you can change what is not.

It does not replace HubSpot. It replaces the person who has to look after HubSpot, which today is you. You are locked into HubSpot Professional for the year at about one hundred and forty euro a month, upgraded for the sequencing, so we work with what you have rather than ask you to change anything. When the renewal comes around it is worth looking at what you actually use it for, because cheaper tools would do the same job. The outcome we are aiming at is that running the outbound becomes about an hour of your week, not a second job in the evenings.

Two options

Option A is the smaller piece of work, and it goes after the companies that are looking now. It is the outreach, running properly on both LinkedIn and email, so that the evening research and the copy-paste between Prospeo, Claude and HubSpot stop being your job. Option B includes all of Option A and adds the work that builds familiarity with the companies that are not looking yet, so that Santegic is a name they already know when their deadline arrives. We would recommend starting with Option A. It is quicker, you can see whether it brings enquiries in, and it gives you a clear view of how we work before you commit to the larger programme.

OPTION A • THE OUTREACH

The Outreach Agent, on LinkedIn and email

- › The Outbound Agent, built for Santegic: finds the companies in your ICP, screens them, finds the right person, researches them, and writes every message individually
- › Both channels as one sequence: your four emails and three LinkedIn touches, with the manual LinkedIn step taken out
- › Connected to HubSpot through its API, so the system loads and runs the sequences rather than you doing it by hand
- › Configured for Santegic, handed over, and your team trained to run it

€9,000 + VAT

About two months from sign-off. Your own tool subscriptions are separate, in your name, sized with you first.

OPTION B • THE WHOLE SYSTEM

The full system, including the companies not yet in the market

- › Everything in Option A
- › Scout, which watches your target companies and tells the Outbound Agent when one is worth writing to: a funding round, a US partnership, a company entering the medical device process, or a new regulation landing on a category
- › The Ghostwriter, publishing in Larry's name and in yours, so that founders and compliance leads know Santegic before the deadline arrives
- › The Campaign Manager, which runs the other agents, drives HubSpot, keeps score and reports what is working

€4,500 per month × 4 months = €18,000 + VAT

About four months. Built, connected, handed over, and your team trained to run it.

WHAT THE PRICE COVERS

The build, the connection to the tools you already pay for, the handover, and training you and Larry to run it. Paul does the building himself and then hands the system over, so that Run with Foxes does not become a permanent cost or a dependency.

WHAT IT DOESN'T

Your own tool subscriptions, in your name and your ownership: Claude Code, and the tools you already have. You are locked into HubSpot for the year, so we would work with it rather than ask you to change anything.

Book a time to chat

Thirty minutes is enough to talk it through, with Larry too if that is useful. Book a time at cal.com/paul-dervan-mjfd50, or email me directly at paul@runwithfoxes.com.
