01 The State owns the AI answers

In 17 of 41 categories the most-named name is a state body or a regulator. Some of those are natural, like Revenue for tax. The striking ones are markets where advertisers spend and the regulator still wins. The Health Insurance Authority, at 0.61, beats every insurer. The Charities Regulator is named more than four times as often as any charity.

02

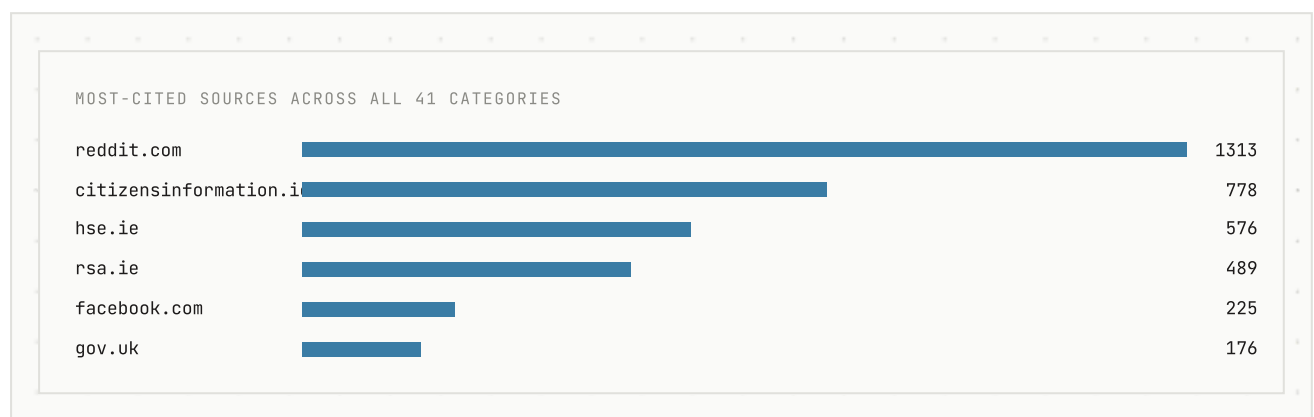

Booking sites and marketplaces beat the brands they list

In 7 categories the answer is a middleman: Booking.com in hotels, LinkedIn Jobs in recruitment, Daft.ie in estate agents, Clutch.co in marketing agencies, DoneDeal in cars, bonkers.ie in energy and TripAdvisor in tourism. If the answer names the middleman, the middleman gets the customer.

03 Reddit is the most-cited source in the whole survey

Reddit is cited 1,313 times, ahead of citizensinformation.ie and the HSE. gov.uk is cited 176 times on Irish questions. What forums say about a brand is now part of how it is found.

Claude answers Irish questions with British and American content

ChatGPT and Google stay in Ireland because they use the location sent with the question. No location was sent on the Claude calls, so these answers measure what Claude does by default.

05 Google often shows no AI answer at all

Google showed no AI Overview on 101 of 924 questions. Those are left out of every rate and never counted as nobody named.

06 Some categories have no owner

The best rate in tourism is 0.14, TripAdvisor. In pharmacies it is 0.15. Nobody has claimed these answers yet.

HOW WE MEASURED IT

One day of data, so no margin yet. Days two and three are running on six categories. Generic names such as Chill and An Post are counted by machine and flagged for a hand read. ChatGPT and Perplexity were asked through their APIs, not the apps.
